PROCLAMATION OF PRESIDENT WILSON TO THE PEOPLE

Washington, April 15.—In a personal appeal addressed tonight to his fellow countrymen, President Wilson calls upon every American citizen—man, woman and child—to join together to make the nation a unit for the preservation of its ideals and for the triumph of democracy in the world war.

"THE SUPREME TEST OF THE NATION HAS COME," says the address. "We must all speak, act and serve together."

Putting the navy on a war footing and raising a great army are the simplest parts of the great task ahead, the President declares, and he urges all the people with particular emphasis upon his words to the farmers to concentrate their energies, practice economy, prove unselfishness and demonstrate efficiency. The address follows:

My Fellow Countrymen:
The entrance of our own beloved country into the grim and terrible war for democracy and human rights which has shaken the world creates so many problems of national life and action which call for immediate consideration and settlement that I hope you will permit me to address to you a few words of earnest counsel and appeal with regard to them.

We are rapidly putting our navy upon an effective war footing and are about to create and equip a great army, but these are the simplest parts of the great task to which we must address ourselves. There is not a single selfish element, so far as I can see, in the cause we are fighting for. We are fighting for what we believe and wish to be the rights of mankind and for the future peace and security of the world. To do this great thing worthily and successfully we must devote ourselves to the service without regard to profit or material advantage and with an energy and intelligence that will rise to the level of the enterprise itself. We must realize to the full how great the task is and how many things, how many kinds and elements of capacity and service and self-sacrifice it involves.

The industrial forces of the country, men and women alike, will be a great national, a great international Service Army—a notable and honored host engaged in the service of the nation and the world, the efficient friends and saviors of free men everywhere. Thousands of men and women of thousands of men otherwise liable to military service will of right and of necessity be excused from that service and assigned to the fundamental, sustaining work of the fields and factories and mines, and they will be as much part of the great patriotic forces of the nation as the men under fire.

I take the liberty, therefore, of addressing this work to the farmers of the country and to all who work on the farms.

The supreme need of our own nation and of the nations with which we are co-operating is an abundance of supplies, and especially of foodstuffs. The importance of an adequate food supply, especially for the present year, is superlative. Without abundant food, alike for the armies and the peoples now at war, the whole great enterprise upon which we have embarked will break down and fail. The world's food reserves are low. Not only during the present emergency, but for some time after peace shall have come both our own people and a large proportion of the people of Europe must rely upon the harvests in America.

Upon the farmers of this country, therefore, in large measure, rests the fate of the war and the fate of the nations. May the nation not count upon them to omit no step that will increase the production of their land or that will bring about the most effective co-operation in the sale and distribution of their products? The time is short. It is of the most imperative importance that everything possible be done and done immediately to make sure of large harvests. I call upon young men and old alike and upon the able-bodied boys of the land to accept and act upon this duty—to turn in hosts to the farms and make certain that no pains and no labor is lacking in this great matter.

I particularly appeal to the farmers of the south to plant abundant foodstuffs as well as cotton. They can show their patriotism in no better or more convincing way than by resisting the great temptation of the present price of cotton and helping, helping upon a great scale, to feed the nation and the people everywhere who are fighting for their liberties and for our own. The variety of their crops will be the visible measure of their comprehension of their national duty.

This let me say to the middlemen of every sort, whether they are handling our foodstuffs or our raw materials of manufacture or the products of our mills and factories.

The eyes of the country will be especially upon you. This is your opportunity for signal service, efficient and disinterested. The country expects you, as it expects all others, to forego unusual profits, to organize and expedite shipments of supplies of every kind, of food, of clothing, with an eye to the service you are rendering and in the spirit of those who enlist in the ranks, for their people, not for themselves. I shall confidently expect you to observe and win the confidence of people of every sort and station.

To the men who run the railways of the country, whether they be managers or operating employees, let me say that, the railways are the arteries of the nation's life and that upon them rests the immense responsibility of seeing to it that those arteries suffer no obstruction of any kind, no inefficiency or slackened power.

To the merchant let me suggest the motto: "Small profits and quick service"; and to the shipbuilder the thought that the life of the nation depends upon him as well food and the war supplies must be carried across the seas no matter how many ships are sent to the bottom. The places of those that go down must be supplied and supplied at once.

To the miner let me say that he stands at the very heart of the nation. If he slackens or fails armies and statesmen are helpless. He also is enlisted in the great Service Army.

Let me suggest also that every one who creates or cultivates a garden helps and helps greatly to solve the problem of the feeding of the nation, and that every housewife who practices strict economy puts herself in the ranks of those who serve the nation. This is the time for America to correct her unparadise fault of wastefulness and extravagance. Let every man and every woman assume the duty of careful, provident work and expenditure in a public duty, as a dictate of patriotism which no one can now expect ever to be excused or forgiven for ignoring.

In the hope that this statement of the needs of the nation and of the word in this hour of supreme crisis may stimulate those to whom it comes and remind all who need reminder of the solemn duties of a time such as the world has never seen before, I beg that all editors and publishers everywhere will give as prominent publication and as wide circulation as possible to this appeal, I venture to suggest also, to all advertising agencies, that they would give it wide-spread repetition. And I hope that all clergymen will not think the theme of an unworthy or inappropriate subject for their pulpit and homily from their pulpits.

The supreme test of the nation has come. We must all speak, act and serve together!

WOODROW WILSON.

Canfield will give evidence of their patriotism by erecting a big pole in the park from which Old Glory will float.

Rev. Billy Sunday in New York is waging a most vigorous war against the devil. It is figured that sixty thousand people hear him daily.

President Wilson appeared at the capitol in Washington Wednesday and in a personal plea that the bill to raise an army by selective draft be expedited. Close observers believe that despite opposition offered the bill will pass.

Assurances reached Washington Wednesday that under no conditions that are now conceivable will the provisional government of Russia yield to the overtures from German and Austrian Socialistic reports to negotiate a separate peace.

"THE SUPREME TEST"

The President's powerful appeal to all the people of this country to do their full share, individually, to help the country in its fight for "what we believe and wish to be the rights of mankind and the future peace and security of the world" will stir the nation mightily. When the President speaks his voice reaches the remotest corners of the land, and President Wilson has never spoken more clearly, more sincerely or more convincingly than in this short address. The effect of it cannot be doubted. It will be responded to with patriotic enthusiasm, with steadfast determination on the part of the people to heed the Chief Executive's exhortation to "speak, act, and serve together."

The vast military and naval preparations which the Government has in hand he considers the simplest part of the great task. The nation must feed its soldiers and sailors but must supply abundant food for a large part of those nations with which we have made common cause. With our enormous resources we can accomplish all that he asks, if every man, woman and child does his full share. We must have ships to carry across the ocean the supplies our allies need, "submarines or no submarines." That is the essential point, that is the phrase that will be on all lips. "Submarines or no submarines, our fleets of supply ships must cross the ocean, carrying food, raw materials for the looms and manufacturers of England, France, Italy and Russia, rails and railway rolling stock, cattle and horses.

Our industries must be made more efficient and prolific than ever, our farmers, who will have all the help the Government can give them, must increase the productiveness of their lands. Upon the South the President urges the need of planting foodstuffs in great quantities as well as cotton, to forego the temptation to profit by the present prices of its great staple. To the middlemen he utters a kindly word of caution and encouragement.

To the railway men, managers and operators alike, to men and women in all trades and professions, in all stations of life, he directly delivers his message.

A noble, well-timed message it is, and it will arouse the people of this country to a strong sense of their responsibility. All that is asked of them they can do, better than any other nation in the world's history. Who can doubt that "the supreme test" will be bravely and successfully met?"—N. Y. Times.

WAR GARDENS

Plant a war garden. Patriotism, like charity, may begin at home—in the backyard, the side yard or the front yard, with a spade and a package of garden seed.

Vacant lot gardening has been preached each spring for years.

Home beautifiers have been urged to utilize their waste areas to their own profit and the profit of the community.

This spring the issue is put upon a new basis.

This year vacant lots are to be cultivated for the nation's sake. Small gardens are to be recruited for service against famine. One is to garden for one's flag this year, not for one's family alone. Home tillage is raised to a new plane of dignity and usefulness.

In Cleveland the movement for a wider utilization of home garden plots has been well organized for effective work. The gospel of the vacant lot tillage is to be pushed vigorously, and results already in evidence indicate how ready the community is to enroll in this branch of national service.

Here is one direction where the prevalent shortage of labor has little effect upon production. Home gardens may be cultivated by home talent and with a minimum of hired assistance. It is the utilization of idle hours that counts in this undertaking, and no member of the family above babyhood need be considered too immature to do his share.—Plain Dealer.
